Sonoma Operational Area Emergency Services

Disaster Messaging System

In the event of a disaster, Sonoma Operational Area Emergency Services uses the Community Alert Network (CAN) to notify residents of imminent or actual danger. CAN is a computer assisted telephone notification system designed to deliver an emergency message to residents in specific areas. In recent years CAN has been used to inform residents about washed out roads, the need to evacuate unsafe areas, and the need to boil drinking water. CAN does have the capability of delivering messages to TDD's for the hearing impaired, and will leave messages on answering machines.

The CAN database contains all Sonoma County telephone numbers with the exception of unlisted numbers. Telephone numbers listed in the Pacific Bell telephone directory with no street numbers are in the database, however they cannot be identified within specific geographical areas, and therefore cannot be notified. Sonoma County residents who have unlisted telephone numbers, or whose street address is not listed in the directory, who would like to have message capability, must request that their address be added to the Community Alert Network. Complete and send in the form printed below. All information provided will be used for emergency purposes only and will not be released for commercial purposes.

Foundation Establishes Kelley Endowment

SRJC's Foundation received a grant of $50,000 from the Lora L. And Martin Kelley Family Foundation Trust to establish the Robert C. Kelley Literary Works Endowment. Kelley was an English instructor at SRJC from 1963 until he retired in 1999. When Robert Kelley was at SRJC, he taught a variety of classes, but preferred teaching remedial English, especially enjoying his work with students who faced significant challenges. He served on the Santa Rosa City Schools Board of Education. He died last May at the age of 77.

The Kelley Endowment will provide the base funding for SRJC's Work of Literary Merit (WOLM) Program.

WOLM selects a literary work each semester, and coordinates a week of activities including lectures, performances, film and other presentations instructors can use as as curriculum resources.

WOLM was established in the early 1980's and has become an integral part in the English 1A curriculum. Kelley was a presenter for this annual program on several occasions while at SRJC.
